Paper Ships and Paper Guns.
A CURIOUS STORY—IT IS A BOAT!

The London Observer describes a new preparation of paper of a remarkable character. The uses to which it may be applied were explained on the 18th of August, at the Phoenix Works, Battersea, as follows:

There were tubes made of paper which had been tested in the most satisfactory manner as rocket tubes. Being made of paper they are, of course, very much lighter than ordinary iron tubes, and they stand the test of rocket firing equally as well as those of metal. Not less remarkable were the thick slabs and boards made of paper. These boards, of one inch in thickness, had been tested by bullet and ball, and the result showed that their power of resistance was equal to ten inches of solid oak. The bullet, which had passed so far through paper board as to cause a projecting scar on the rear, would have gone clean through the oak, fracturing and tearing it in all directions, while in the paper board the perforation made was a small, round hole. These paper boards are admirably adapted for the sides of ships; their specific gravity is somewhat less than that of oak, and they are easily fixed to the framework of vessels. They have, however, this additional advantage: they do not require copper sheathing to prevent fouling, they are non-absorbent, and neither animal nor vegetable life flourishes upon their surface, as is the case with timber and iron. They have also this further advantage, that they are incombustible. No amount of heat will set them in a blaze. The application of great heat will produce combustion in the immediate neighborhood of the flame, but anything like ordinary burning is quite out of the question. In addition, however, to all these good qualities, paper has positively the advantage over timber and iron in the matter of cost. Mr. Sturtevant, the inventor, well-known for the successful manner in which he has created the decay of certain portions of the exterior of the Houses of Parliament, has discovered a fiber which grows in the southern portions of Germany, and which may be converted into a rough kind of paper at a cost as little as that of timber, and which is as strong as the other. Not content, however, with forming the sides of ships of paper, the inventor is now engaged in the construction of light field pieces, specially adapted for mountain warfare and for jungle fighting. Results already obtained by experiments with paper tubes, will be found to answer the purpose admirably. Tubes have already been formed of this prepared paper, and they have stood the test against iron in the most satisfactory manner.

So far as we were enabled to ascertain the process of manufacture, it consists of lapping sheets or rolls of paper moistened with a solution of which zipsia is the principal ingredient, one over the other, until the requisite degree of thickness or strength is attained, and exposing the material for a short time until it becomes thoroughly hardened. This zipsia is of the nature of a gum, and is found in considerable quantities in the Egyptian desert. It is the peculiarity of giving extraordinary hardness to any surface upon which it is placed, and it was very extensively used in the preparation employed for preserving the stone in the exterior of the Houses of Commons. It has also been used for the exterior of the Bank of England, the interior of the dome of St. Paul's, on which Mr. Penrose has painted his frescoes, and it has just been applied with extraordinary success to the arches of the Chatham and Dover railway at the Elephant and Castle station, which have hitherto suffered considerably from damp and the infiltration of water from the roadway.

There appears to be no limit to the application of this useful material. In addition to the preservation of paper, linen, stone, brick, plaster, and other material, another most useful application of the advantage was shown in the perfection of a material resembling duck paper, and suitable for carpets, which can be prepared of any color and with endless variety of pattern. A slight alteration in the mode of treatment converts canvas into a description of cloth, and the material is so strong of wear, as may be seen from some pieces laid down in the workshops at Battersea. The materials of a house are now in course of construction, for the purpose of testing the adaptability of the paper boards to the construction of emigrants' houses, temporary churches and barracks. Already large quantities of a material known as "Panonia," or leather cloth, is manufactured by the use of this extraordinary substance, and made up into boots and shoes, which rival in the durability the best kinds of leather, and it is equally valuable for preserving stone, brick, works in plaster, or any similar substance.

LETTER FROM JONAS KING, THE MISSIONARY.—Rev. Jonas King, the veteran missionary, now on a visit to his home, writes to the New York Observer as follows:

With the exception of nine months, I have been absent from my country for the greater part of forty-three years. But this absence has never cooled, or in the least abated, my affection for my native land. I have been in a position to witness, however, perhaps, than they who have always lived in this country, the blessings which we, as a nation, enjoy—blessings which God has, in my judgment, lavished upon us—blessings enjoyed by no other nation under the whole heavens.

I have at various times traveled through fifteen or sixteen kingdoms of Europe; I have traveled in Asia and Africa, but I have found no nation or kingdom which I consider equal to our own. I consider this as the glory of all lands. Here, with an exception, and that is the cause of all our troubles, all enjoy true civil and religious liberty. There is no place, I think, that has seen, where the poor are so easily and abundantly relieved as in this country. Every man is more or less appreciated according to what he is really worth, and about the Union he restored. There is no nation upon earth which has attained so far throughout the world will be no great as that of our own. On account of this influence, as well as for many other reasons, I earnestly desire the preservation of the Union.

Our fathers, both in the North and in the South, put upon our constitution "The Federal Union." That shows that none of them contemplated or left any room for a secession. "If it be a Union," and "union" they must be as good as the sun and moon endure and the stars of heaven continue to shine. Had Athens and Sparta, Argos and Corinth, Thebes and Plataea, and other Grecian States, been united, instead of seceding from each other, and fighting each other, Greece would have been the most powerful nation on earth, and might have remained so to this day. And if we remain united, no nation under heaven will ever venture to attack us with a hope of success. We shall become the scorn of tyrants, and a cause of terror in the hearts of all who would civil and religious liberty throughout the world.

With many thanks for your kind welcome, I remain yours, truly,
JONAS KING.

"Ah, John, you won't have me much longer! I shall never leave this bed alive." "Please yourself, Betty, and I'll be pleased to see you," returned John, with good-naturedly. "I have been a good wife to you, John," persisted the dying woman. "Middlin', Betty, middlin'," responded the matter-of-fact husband.

"Sonny, can you cipher in two syllables?" "Yeth thir, and thell in the rule of three all day long." "Smart boy. Now see if you can tell what point of cold slaw will come to a cent a yard?" "Well, my boy, do you know what 'stax' means?" said a schoolmaster to a

"Give him the 'Mitten'." Seventeen years ago there was a fair girl so pure, so lovely, so refined, that she still rises to my mind as almost akin to the angels. She was wooed and ultimately won by a handsome young man of considerable wealth. He played cards, drank, and delighted in hunting, and kept a fine pack of hounds. He neither played cards, drank wine, nor used tobacco. He lived on his money, the interest of which alone would have supported a family handsomely. I never saw the fair bride again until a few days ago. Seventeen years passed away, and with them her beauty and her youth—her husband's fortune and his life, during the latter part of which they lived in a log cabin on the banks of the Ohio river, near Blennerhassett Island. The husband had no business capacity. He was a gentleman of education, of refinement, of noble impulses; but when his money was gone he could get no other help. He became a beggar, and he did not know how to do anything. For while he floundered about, first trying one thing and then another, but failure was written on them all. He, however, finally obtained a situation; the laborer was great, the competition small; it was that star of his hero's efforts to discharge his duty acceptably, he overworked himself and died, leaving his widow and six girls in utter destitution. In seventeen years the sweet and joyous and beautiful girl, who had been a broken-hearted, care-worn, poverty-stricken widow, with a house full of helpless children.

Young woman! If a rich young man asks you to marry him, and has no occupation, or trade, or calling by which he could make a living, if he were driven on his own resources, you may give him your respect, but "give him the mitten."

Whatever may be a young man's qualities, if he is fond of going to the theater, "refuse" him. If a young man shows by his conversation that he is an admirer of fast horses, and pretty well acquainted with the qualities and "time" of the best racing nags of the country, when he asks your hand "give him the mitten" only.

If you ever hear a young man speak of his father and mother disrespectfully, contemptuously, do not encourage his attentions; he will make your heart ache before you die. If you ever know a young man who likes to stand around tavern-doors, at the street corners, and about "groceries," cut your hand off rather than place it in his. He is worth only the "mitten."

If you ever hear a young man speak of light field pieces, specially adapted for mountain warfare and jungle fighting, results already obtained by experiments with paper tubes, will be found to answer the purpose admirably. Tubes have already been formed of this prepared paper, and they have stood the test against iron in the most satisfactory manner.
